A SETTLEMENT LIKELY

The Trouble of Venezuela and Great Britain.

A CONCILIATORY MOVE PROBABLE.

The Long Broken Diplomatic Negotiations May Be Renewed Feeling of the Hot Headed Revolutionists—A Most Unreasonable Population to Deal With.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Special.—The next move on the international chess-board is expected to be made by President Crespo of Venezuela. It is reported at the state department today that efforts have been made by the government of the United States to induce the Venezuelans to a more reasonable attitude toward the British. In this connection, it is said that the British government has been making a series of conciliatory moves, and that the Venezuelans are expected to respond to these moves in a similar manner. The British government has been making a series of conciliatory moves, and that the Venezuelans are expected to respond to these moves in a similar manner. The British government has been making a series of conciliatory moves, and that the Venezuelans are expected to respond to these moves in a similar manner.

Secretary Olney's Position. In order to prepare himself for this emergency, President Crespo, through his minister in Washington, has sought to induce the American government to agree to stand by him in resistance to the British demand. He has argued that the British demand is an interference with the sovereignty of Venezuela, and that the Venezuelans are entitled to resist such interference. He has also argued that the British demand is an interference with the sovereignty of Venezuela, and that the Venezuelans are entitled to resist such interference.

Both the president and Secretary Olney have made it clear that it is not the duty of the United States to act as a protector of the South American republics, except in the case of a revolution. They have also made it clear that it is not the duty of the United States to act as a protector of the South American republics, except in the case of a revolution. They have also made it clear that it is not the duty of the United States to act as a protector of the South American republics, except in the case of a revolution.

Instead of promising to protect Venezuela against payment of a just indemnity to England for the Cuban outrage, this government has indicated that, even if England should send a fleet to La Guayra, the principal port of Venezuela, to collect the indemnity, it would not interfere. Of course, this is a most unwise policy, and it is to be hoped that the government will soon change its mind.

These facts give an idea of the difficult position in which President Crespo's labor and popular feeling have placed him. He is a man of high character, and he is a man of high character. He is a man of high character, and he is a man of high character. He is a man of high character, and he is a man of high character.

The schoolhouse line. I am told by high officials of the state department that a diplomatic agent of Venezuela is back to make an appeal to the British government. He will be accompanied by a high official of the state department, and he will be accompanied by a high official of the state department.

TRIUMPH ABSOLUTE.

Not a Dissenting Voice.

The Public Test at Columbus Decisive.

Bright's Disease Curable.

Evidence from Other States.

There can be no longer any question as to whether Bright's disease and indeed all forms of kidney and bladder troubles are curable. The great public test made by the newspapers, and the people of Columbus has settled that in the most conclusive and unimpeachable manner.

Thirty-six hundred people suffering from kidney or bladder disease in one form or another tried the remedy and ninety percent of them were either cured or relieved.

Columbus is still ringing with Dr. Hobbs' praise and will continue to ring for many days to come. Mothers bless him for their children's lives, children give praise for the restoration of their parents to health, patients congratulate their doctors upon the nobility of their profession and the new star that has been placed in its crown.

Dr. Hobbs' Sparagus Kidney Pills have worked marvels and won laurels from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf.

That the public may judge for themselves how great are the achievements of this marvelous remedy we append a testimonial letter. Did space admit, we could give thousands where we now give one.

Dr. Hobbs' Sparagus Kidney Pills. A Prominent Elk's Dangerous Kidney Troubles—Refused by Several Insurance Companies Till He Cured Himself With Hobbs' Sparagus Pills—Since Then Accepted.

Chicago, Sept. 19, 1895. Gentlemen: For some time back I had been suffering from an aggravated case of kidney disorder.

It made me very ill and was considered so bad that several insurance companies refused to issue me a policy. Doctors and their medicines were unable to cure me, indeed, one physician in high standing informed me that I was suffering from Bright's disease, which, as you know, is considered almost incurable.

My symptoms were not so painful as disquieting and kept me under constant nervous strain. I was nervous and irritable, had an almost unquenchable thirst, would suffer from periodical chills and restlessness, uneasy feelings, had headache, backache and pain in my sides, sleeplessness, neuralgia and other minor complaints.

As a last resource I decided to try your Sparagus Kidney Pills, and, seeing that I improved, I continued to take them regularly for about two months, by which time I felt altogether a new man. I have lately had myself examined by a physician, who assures me that there is now nothing whatever wrong with my kidneys, and, as if in further proof of this, I have just been accepted as a good risk by one of the most particular life insurance companies.

STORIES OF THE DAY.

Some Interesting Incidents in the Life of Colonel Dan Lamont.

This is a story that may possibly interest the boys of the country. All American boys are wide awake and quick to learn. It is a story concerning a little incident in the life of the Hon. Daniel Scott Lamont, now secretary of war. Mr. Lamont was a poor boy in Cortland county. He subsequently became a clerk in a state department at Albany. When Grover Cleveland was elected governor of the state in 1882, he was invited in all quarters pertaining to state legislation, and when he arrived at Albany he had not selected his private secretary. Mr. Lamont was at that time a newspaper correspondent on the Albany Argus, of which the chief owner then was the late Daniel Manning. Mr. Manning said to Governor Cleveland:

"You haven't any private secretary."

"No," replied Cleveland, "and I want one."

"Well," replied Mr. Manning, "I have a young man here who will help you until you can select a private secretary."

It was at that time that the secretary of war was first brought into close communication with Mr. Cleveland. Mr. Lamont did not think that he was to remain as the private secretary of the governor, but he remained three or four weeks, and then Mr. Cleveland said he could not get along without him. Mr. Lamont from his side had been taught that he must do everything well. His parents taught him that he must not shirk the smallest task in life. He must, they said, pay as much attention to the little things as to the big things, and Mr. Lamont never forgot this training.

The time ran along, and Mr. Cleveland was elected president. Just before his inauguration, he made that famous remark that Colonel Dan must go with him to Washington. This governor of the state and this first Democratic president since President Buchanan's time, who had been the painstaking, careful, studious ways of Colonel Dan. For four years Mr. Lamont was the president's private secretary, and then he returned with him to New York and was intimately connected with him for four years more. When Mr. Cleveland went to Washington again in 1892, he took Daniel Lamont with him as secretary of war.

If the American boys will visit the war department, they will find Mr. Lamont there from early until late. He is blue eyed, with an urban bristling mustache. His ways are just as kindly as when he was a newspaper writer.

A correspondent had a pleasant talk with Secretary Lamont a few days ago in Washington, and he studied the secretary of war in the interest of the American boy. The secretary was told by the correspondent that his own little son had a telegraph wire leading into a neighbor's house, and this mere statement aroused an interest in the secretary of war.

"That is a good thing," said the secretary. "I remember in my early life that I was a telegraph operator. If you once thoroughly learn telegraphy, you will never forget it. It remains with you as long as you live. I have not had occasion to use telegraphy for a number of years, but all the boys of this country, if they have time, ought to learn it. Several years ago, after my father's death, I wanted to bring my mother to Washington. I was in Mr. Grayville, my home town in Cortland county, and it was necessary for me to take a number of railroads in order to reach the main line by which I could take my mother to Washington. It was necessary to change cars a number of times on these local roads, and in one or two instances the trains were late, and I feared that I could not get to the main line in time to reach Washington."

"At last it became positively known to me that unless I could make a certain connection my mother would be compelled to remain over Sunday in a small and cheerless town. I knew a president of a railroad at which I was employed of my predicament, I telegraphed to him, telling him that my train was late, and asked him if he would not write to the superintendent of the place where I was apparently destined to be kept overnight and direct that the train on the main road be held for me until my local train arrived. Before I got to the local station where the main line train was to be met I had to change cars. It was a dreary little station, and I remember well the anxiety that I had when sitting in the waiting room with my mother, not knowing whether my dispatch had been received, when I heard clinking over the wire in that little station an inquiry from the superintendent of the road, 'Is Colonel Lamont there?' The telegraph operator looked around the room to see only two persons, my mother and myself, there before he began to reply 'No.'"

"Just as he said that word I stepped up, and I said 'My friend, I have unintentionally overheard the inquiry going over your line as to whether Colonel Lamont was here. That is my name.' The telegraph operator quickly corrected his 'No,' informed the superintendent that I was there, and the word came back that the main line train would be held for me. This is only a little incident in my life, but it demonstrates the value of telegraphy. My knowledge of telegraphy gave me the opportunity to bring my mother to Washington, and I am sure that all boys in our country, if they have the time, should learn telegraphy."

Secretary Lamont now has fine horses and carriages. As secretary of war he is a high government officer and is the guest at all of the state dinners at Washington. It may not be uninteresting to add that Secretary Lamont never drank a drop of intoxicating liquor in his life, and he does not know how to drink. He has succeeded because he has been painstaking and shrewd.—New York Sun.

The Triumph of Reform. The day with a pull and plenty of rain, the street and reached to the door of the magistrate's office. We reached the door and attempted to go in. It resisted for a moment. He strained every muscle, getting very red in the face and angrier each minute as the door refused to be pulled open. The alderman looked down. On the door he saw the word "Push" in small white letters.

Then the alderman with a pull felt ashamed. He had been backing up against reform and had been wasted.—Truth.

Our people are growing more and more in the habit of looking to L. H. Flocken for the latest and best of everything in the drug line. A ONCE FAMOUS CORRESPONDENT. The Exalted Anger by Calling New York "A City of One Street."

Antonio Gallenga, the former famous Times correspondent, died recently at his residence, in Monmouthshire. He had reached the ripe old age of 83. He was a member of an old Piedmontese family, and was educated at the University of Parma. Leaving Italy in consequence of the political events of 1831, he made his way after a time to the United States, but returned to England in 1839. Later he was charged d'affaires for Piedmont at Frankfurt, and from 1841 to 1861 was a member of the Piedmontese and Italian parliament.

Signor Gallenga was best known in this country from his connection with The Times, which lasted from 1859 to 1883. In the interest of that paper he repeatedly traveled through Spain and Italy and through the Spanish Antilles and South America. George Augustus Sala said Gallenga must have written thousands of leaders on foreign subjects for The Times, and in his "Life" tells the following story:

"For many years Gallenga has been a member of the Athenaeum club, and yet not very long since, when I was asked by the pert young editor of a weekly paper to give him a list of eminent journalists whose portraits he might have engraved, and I mentioned the name of Antonio Gallenga as that of one of the most gifted and most distinguished members of my craft, the pert young editor stared at me and said he did not know who Gallenga was. It was Gallenga who gave such mortal offense during The Times, and in his 'Life' tells the following story:

"One of the best known stories about him is that concerning his visit, along with Sala, to King Alfonso XII. They had traveled during the night, and on arrival at their destination were suddenly summoned to breakfast with the king. The cold had been intense, and the water was all frozen, and they were in evening dress, with a good deal of coal dust on their shirt fronts. Indeed they looked more like sweeps than respectable journalists.

Suddenly a happy thought struck Gallenga. 'Did you ever try candles to wash with?' he asked. And eating the action to the words he began rubbing his face and hands with one. Sala followed his example, and both managed to get off a considerable quantity of grime. They entered the royal saloon with a truly awful face, and the countenance of their companions did not excrete the slightest notice.—Westminster Gazette.

Spring goods are coming every day. They are interesting. They should interest you. They will interest you. New Spring Dress Goods, new Spring Cambrics. EMBROIDERIES—there is a reason for our wonderful Embroidery business. It is this: We buy embroideries from the manufacturers who have New York offices where samples are displayed. They sell to the jobbers and to the large retail trade. Our push and energy has placed us among the large retailers. This is a benefit secured by us which finally accrues to you. These embroideries are manufactured in St. Gall, Switzerland.

EVERYTHING ADVERTISED IS IN STOCK AND WILL BE SOLD. SOME OF THESE GOODS WILL HOLD OUT FOR WEEKS. OTHERS ARE IN SMALLER LOTS AND WILL LAST BUT A FEW DAYS.
